Commenting on the report, an analyst from Market Research Future (MRFR)’s team said: “The market is continuously emerging, and is estimated to continue the same in the near future. This large growth is majorly attributed to increasing change in lifestyle over the globe which is leading to cancer. For instance, unhealthy eating habits are constantly growing in developing countries causing cancer. In addition to that, rise in cancer technology, development of new therapies with the use of targeted monoclonal antibodies is also primarily driving the growth of global Antibody Drug Conjugate market.

However, factors such as; diversity of cancerous cell types and antigens and the time required for trial and error methods are inhibiting the growth of this market.”
