"On this day, August 26, 2016, I've chosen to extend a warm and open invitation to the inhabitants of the world to join, support, and sanction me as their honorary Credit Czar, FICO educator, human rights expander, financial system liberator, and as defender and spokesperson for children and adults victimized by fraud and predatory behavior," stated David Howe, FICO professional and national child guardian. "I also apologize for failing to establish an online presence sooner. But protecting and advocating relentlessly for the nation's children while acting as a fiduciary for the banking and credit system has consumed an incredible amount of time and resources during the past decade.

"Indeed, I'm hopeful that many will decide to join our social networks by adding their voice and presence on our Twitter and Facebook pages. I'm also optimistic that the participation will prove lasting and positive, with future benefits too profound to fully appreciate or even contemplate at this moment," Howe concluded.
