SinuSoothe is a 100% natural nasal spray that can cure chronic sinus infections better than antibiotics. It is non addictive and has no side effects.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, UNITED STATES, August 26, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Unfortunately, according to research published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, the antibiotics you're likely taking for sinus infections aren't doing anything to make you feel better.

Sinusitis is one of the most common infections in the United States. Its 24 million annual cases account for nearly one fifth of all antibiotic prescriptions. Because sinusitis can be caused by either a virus or bacteria, by definition, antibiotics won't have any effect on the viral infections. And, according to the AMA report, it doesn't have any effect on the bacterial infection either.

Amoxicillin, the most commonly prescribed antibiotic prescribed to treat sinus infections, doesn't work any better than a placebo, according to Jay Piccirillo of Washington University School of Medicine, one of the authors of the study.

After three days, patients who were prescribed amoxicillin didn't feel any better than those who received a placebo. Because sinusitis usually goes away on its own, it's better to not take any antibiotics at all, Piccirillo says.

For those unlucky enough to have chronic sinusitis, antibiotics don't fair much better.

Chronic sinusitis, also called chronic rhinosinusitis, is a medical condition that typically lasts longer than twelve weeks or keeps recurring. Inflammation of the sinuses is caused by a sinus infection, and it can have an adverse effect on the quality of a persons life.

The mucous membranes of the nasal membranes become swollen and inflamed, the openings get blocked, and proper sinus drainage is inhibited leading to a mucous build up. These blocked, inflamed sinuses create a moist environment that makes it easier for bacterial infection to occur and take hold.

It can be caused by recurring bouts of acute sinusitis combined with a low immune system, the common cold, sinus allergies, nasal polyps or tumors, a deviated nasal septum, trauma to the face, and regular exposure to pollutants such as cigarette smoke. Less commonly it can be caused by medical conditions such as cystic fibrosis, gastroesophageal reflux, HIV and other immune system

The symptoms are varied and can include nasal congestion, sinus pain, sinus headaches, fatigue and dizziness.

Unfortunately, conventional antibiotics fail to effectively treat chronic sinusitis since the bacterial infection becomes resistant to them, due to them being over prescribed by doctors. Also, many chronic sinus infections are fungal in nature, and antibiotics, which are themselves a mold, can actually make the condition worse.

However, there is hope for the millions of chronic sinusitis sufferers in the United States and elsewhere around the world.

SinuSoothe, developed by two chronic sinusitis sufferers, might just hold the key to eternal bliss.

Containing natural antibiotics such as cinnamon oil, cumin oil, and manuka oil, this 100% natural nasal spray effectively cures fungal and bacterial sinus infections - in some cases in just a couple of days.
