CUPERTINO, CA, UNITED STATES, September 8, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The European Day of Languages, celebrated on the 26th of September every year, was launched after the success of the European Year of Languages for the year 2001. At the eve of the closing event for European Year of Languages in Belgium (December, 2001), the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe took the initiative to launch the European Day of Languages to continue the cultural objective of raising awareness of Europe's rich linguistic diversity, encouraging citizens to learn two or more languages and widen the language options horizon to learners (European Day of Languages, 2016).

Europe is said to be the home of more than 200 local languages, of which 24 are stated as official languages. The increase in immigration and global mobility over the last couple of decades has led to a rise in the number of languages spoken. Research suggests that almost 300 languages are spoken in schools in the city of London (England) alone (The Telegraph, 2015). Being culturally and linguistically diverse has various advantages, and the benefits of multilingualism are not just confined to foreign language fluency; they expand positive cognitive, personal, social and professional outcomes (MultilingualLiving, 2010).
