PUNE, INDIA, September 13, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Global Biomass Pellets Industry

Analysts forecast the Global Biomass Pellets market to grow at a CAGR of 11.0 percent over the period 2014-2019. Biomass pellets are normally used as a heating fuel. The use of biomass pellets for heating and as a power source has increased enormously during recent years with many households and industrial facilities using pellet stoves or boilers over old-style wood-fired equipment. These pellets are generally derived from various sources including the timber industry, sawdust, sugarcane crop, woody plants, and switch grass or miscanthus. Power generation using biomass pellets is seeing an increased use. Biomass is an ideal substitute for conventional fossil fuels for heating and power generation purposes. There are a number of technical options available to make use of biomass pellets as a renewable energy source. With biomass gaining importance as a renewable energy source, the Global Biomass Pellets market is also witnessing significant growth.
