

Star Mountain Capital Hosts Students From the University of Colorado's Leeds School of Business

Students from the University of Colorado Visit Star Mountain's Offices in New York During the 2016 Wall Street Trek

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, September 23, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Today Star Mountain Capital, LLC ("Star Mountain") hosted students from the University of Colorado's Leeds School of Business at their New York headquarters located at Tower 57, 135 East 57th Street. Students from the Leeds School's Finance and Quantitative Finance programs and Investment Banking Seminar came to New York for the 2016 Wall Street Trek to gain industry and career perspectives from a number of leading financial services firms including Goldman Sachs, BlackRock and Star Mountain Capital.

"Education and internships are very important to Star Mountain," said Brett Hickey, Star Mountain's Founder and CEO. "We run year-round paid internship programs as part of our recruiting and talent development program. We also help our portfolio companies and fund investments with their recruiting and talent development as part of our Collaborative Ecosystem."

While visiting, the students learned about Star Mountain's history and how it provides capital and resources to the underserved market of small and medium-sized businesses, also referred to as the lower middle-market. They also heard about first-hand experience from young professionals and former interns, participated in a Q&A session with the senior team, and took a tour of Star Mountain's tech-forward, innovative offices, which include stand up desks and whiteboard walls for all employees.
