LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, U.S.A., September 22, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dean Caldwell, novelist and Americana serial short story writer of "Alabama," "Alaska," "Arizona," "Arkansas," "California," "Colorado," "Connecticut," "Delaware," "Florida," "Georgia" and "Hawaii" was recently contacted by Queen Elizabeth II of England staff.

"This was in reference to an earlier letter that I had mailed to Queen Elizabeth II asking Her Majesty if she could please nominate her own country's most successful espionage novelist, Mr. David John Moore Cornwell, now age 85, for a British Royal Knighthood who writes under the pen name of 'John le Carre'," said Dean Caldwell.

"A Miss Jennie Vine, Deputy Correspondence Coordinator for Buckingham Palace wrote back to say that she had forwarded my letter to the Honors and Appointment Secretariat who will forward it to the Prime Minister who then submits a list of recommendations to Queen Elizabeth II," concluded Dean Caldwell. "I hope Mr. Moore receives it before his 86th birthday which is on October 19th. Mr. le Carre' is currently the world's best espionage novelist and he certainly deserves this British Royal Knighthood."
