STEVENSVILLE, MICHIGAN, UNITED STATES,
September 28, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Daytona Beach, Florida / Stevensville, Michigan – September 28, 2016: The David C. Hinson Middle School in Daytona Beach Florida received a welcome donation recently: A custom tarp to protect the school's Bocce Court. The gift came from a far-away benefactor: Mike Dill, CEO of TarpsNow, based in Stevensville, Michigan. The Bocce Court is used in conjunction with the Special Olympics Unified Champions School project.

"Thanks to great folks at Tarps Now, our court will be kept dry and intact."

Linda Krenzler

Linda Krenzler, ESE Teacher at the school explained, "When you live beachside in Daytona Beach, Florida, thunder storms are daily occurrences. As a result, the clay court is left with deep washouts and mushy clay. Partners and athletes are unable to practice. Depending on the amount of rain the team often had to wait till the clay dried out. Once it dried out if the repairs were not made correctly the clay which dried like concrete would be uneven and difficult to play on. This situation often led to frustration that dampened the highest spirits!"

Ms. Krenzler continued, "Thanks to great folks at Tarps Now, our court will be kept dry and intact. Mike Dill, President and CEO of Tarps Now, donated a custom tarp that was specially designed and made from materials that are perfect for our court. The team is excited to start the practicing for the next Bocce Ball competitions."

About the Special Olympics Unified Champions Schools Project:

This project provides opportunities for young people of all abilities to be leaders in their schools and communities by promoting equality and acceptance. It promotes social inclusion through shared sports training and competition experiences. Students with and without intellectual disabilities are joined on the same team and playing field. The guiding principle, training together and playing together, is a quick path to friendship and understanding.
