

Making the Car Buying Process Easier and Efficient

MONROE, IOWA, USA, October 3, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- If you make a lot of purchases online, you're one of the 78% of the US who are shopping online. When it comes to big purchases, though, there aren't a lot of good websites that can provide a one stop shop. KosLo.com and Executive Auto Shippers are looking to change that for the auto buying industry.

KosLo is an online service that connects car dealerships with potential customers across the country. Their services works for both new and pre-owned purchases, with the customers inputting their preferred year, make, model, and other features they may be looking for. The difference between KosLo and the other sites is they allow participating dealers to bid on price, if they have the customer's requested vehicle in inventory. Offers are then presented to the consumer to make a final choice. This helps customers find the exact vehicle they are wanting at the best price possible.

KosLo knew that in order to offer the best buying service possible, they needed an extra element that others weren't offering. That's how they decided to join forces with EAS. "We are excited about our partnership with Executive Auto Shippers as it is one more step towards making the entire car buying process easier and more efficient for both the consumer and the dealership," stated Founder and CEO of KosLo, Devin Koskan. He goes on to say that by combining the ability to find, finance, and ship a vehicle to their home will grow a customer's search area from local to national. "We are eager to provide a solid solution for how consumers purchase their next vehicle," added Koskan.
