

Registration Now Open For Leading Army Conference Land Forces Simulation and Training 2017

8th Annual Land Forces Simulation and Training is now open for registration

LONDON, SELECT, UNITED KINGDOM, October 6, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Registration is now live for SMi Group's, 8th annual Land Forces Simulation and Training, taking place in Central London on the 13th and 14th February 2017.

A key theme of this conference will be the demand for realism in training for creating a robust representation of the physical, mental and ethical challenges on the battlefield. Covering simulation systems and virtual training solutions as a safe and viable alternative to live fire training.

Unlike previous events, 2017's will have a more direct focus on Land Forces, with a brand new, expert speaker line-up, covering all areas of training, such as: the dismounted soldier, manned and unmanned vehicles, fire support, synthetic training, multinational exercises, simulation systems and much more.

Attendees will get the chance to explore with experts in their fields, the growing importance of optimising effectiveness, cost, efficiency and interoperability of training for individual nations and their allies. Featured topics include:

- UK MoD Host Nation Address: Colonel Alistair Rodgers, Assistant Head for Training Capability Development, UK MoD
- Ensuring Operational Overmatch through Effective Simulation and Training at the 7th Army Training Command
Brigadier General Tony Aguto, Commanding Officer, 7th Army Training Command, U.S Army Europe
- Providing Effective, Strategic, and Proven Training for the German Land Forces
Brigadier General Ralf Lungershausen, Commandant of the Land Systems Technology Training
