

Certification to ISO 27001 proves that your organization takes information security seriously, says IT Governance

ELY, CAMBRIDGESHIRE, UNITED KINGDOM, October 21, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- IT Governance, the leading provider of cybersecurity and ISO 27001 expertise, is urging organizations to achieve certification to the international standard for cybersecurity best-practice, ISO 27001, and prove to customers and stakeholders that information security is a serious matter.

This comes in response to this week's National Cyber Security Awareness Month (NCSAM) theme "Our Continuously Connected Lives: What's your 'apptitude'?" which focuses on providing strategies for security, safety and privacy. To support the NCSAM campaign, IT Governance encourages organizations to take advantage over their competitors and make use of internationally recognized cybersecurity best practices.

Alan Calder, the founder and chief executive officer of IT Governance, said: "Over 600 US-based organizations and around 24,000 organizations globally have already achieved certification to ISO 27001, and every year the number of certifications grows exponentially. We encourage organizations competing in the international marketplace and wishing to gain competitive advantage over their competitors to implement the internationally recognized cybersecurity best practice and achieve ISO 27001 certification. ISO 27001 certification proves that your organization takes information security seriously."

ISO 27001 is the best-practice standard for an information security management system (ISMS). The Standard encompasses people, processes and technology, the three pillars of an organization's robust information security posture.

Organizations seeking to avoid the unrecoverable financial and reputational damage associated with cyber attacks and data breaches by implementing an ISO 27001-compliant ISMS can use qualified expertise, resources and tools in a cost- and time-effective manner with IT Governance's ISO 27001 packaged solutions.
