In 1999, biometrics was introduced as an application to render authentication after identifying and verifying biological and physiological traits such as voice, palm geometry, DNA, gait, fingerprints, facial features, iris, signature, and vein geometry. This technology is reliable, as it cannot be lost or forgotten by an individual.

Verification is a one-to-one matching process that verifies the biometrics traits of an individual against a set template in the database. Identification is a one-to-many matching process wherein the biometrics traits of an individual are matched against all templates in the database to determine an individual's identity.

Research analysts forecast the global biometrics as a service market to grow at a CAGR of 17.11% during the period 2016-2020.
