

ALTCP.org Launches Revamped Website

ALTCP.org launches new website that makes planning for long term care quick and easy.

FORT MYERS, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, October 26, 2016
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Focusing more on interactivity, the new website is set to simplify user experience as customers plan for their long term care.

The Association for Long Term Care Planning (ALTCP.org) launches its newly updated website, www.altcp.org. Designed to cater to customers across different age groups, the site is remodeled to provide visitors with the ultimate user experience. From accessible resources and tools to interactive pages that guide individuals in planning through a tailored approach, this platform is set to make long term care planning quick, easy, and comprehensive.

With accessibility and interactivity in mind, the website now features an interactive Long Term Care Planning Quiz, which provides participants step-by-step instructions on planning through a series of easy-to-answer questions. It also provides an interactive map that shows its readers the most recent costs of care in every state in America. New updates also include in-depth materials on long term care insurance, access to long term care insurance quotes with quick turnaround time, and contact information of service locators in various areas. The site also supplies caregiver resources and support information.

Furthermore, each page of the site was revamped to enhance navigation and functionality.

It cannot be stressed enough how long term care planning is not only beneficial but necessary for all Americans. So many people see long term care planning as unnecessary because of the notion that families are more than enough to provide the care that we may need. "With this kind of thinking, we put our loved ones and ourselves in a very compromising position," ALTCP.org founder and LTC Global COO Sukhjit Bassi shares. He further adds that, "through this website, we wish to assist readers in realizing why they need to have a plan, and why they need to start now."
