

80 Year Old Teacher Receives MBE from the Queen

Pioneer teacher Robyn Dalby-Stockwell received an MBE, for services to children, from the Queen in Buckingham Palace, London.

CAMBRIDGE, CAMBRIDGESHIRE, UNITED KINGDOM, November 5, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Robyn Dalby-Stockwell pioneered synthetic phonics as a fast and easy way of teaching children to read. Despite opposition she has spent over 50 years teaching those who suffered the results of fashionable but inferior teaching methods. Her success is legendary and she has guided generations of children from illiteracy to university success. No effort is too great to support children in need of help, and Robyn is determined to carry on teaching for as long as she is able.

The Queen's Investiture

Robyn Dalby-Stockwell is a writer, teacher, grandmother and director of Alonah Reading Cambridge Helping struggling readers achieve literacy with books, reading plans and one to one tuition.
