The analysts forecast the global automated trading market to grow at a CAGR of 10.31% during the period 2016-2020.
The automated trading systems are also referred to as algorithmic trading or mechanical trading systems where it allows the trader to establish specific rules for both trade entries and trade exits. They are generally programmed in a way so that they can be automatically executed through computer systems. The entry and exit in the trade is based on the moving average crossovers. Sometimes it also requires the understanding of the programming language that is specific to the user’s trading platform. The automated trading requires the use of software that is linked to a direct access broker and the specific rules that are written in the proprietary language in the platform. For instance, the TradeStation platform uses the Easy programming language.
