

Marijuana Expungements Under Prop 64

Proposition 64 - How to Expunge Your Marijuana Conviction

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, November 9, 2016

/EINPresswire.com/ -- The passage of Proposition 64 allows those convicted under the previous marijuana laws to return to court and have their conviction either completely expunged or reduced from a felony to a misdemeanor, says California Expungement Attorney

Richard Glen Boire, of RGB LAW GROUP.

"With 86 percent of employers now conducting background checks," says Boire, "the expungement provisions of Prop. 64 have the potential to help tens of thousands of Californian's get back to work, get a student loan, or to advance in their careers and better provide for their families."

“

The felony reduction provisions of Prop 64," says Boire, "are especially powerful because reducing an old marijuana felony will restore all civil rights, including the right to possess a firearm.””

Expunge Marijuana Prop 64

According to the California Department of Justice, between 2006 and 2015, alone, nearly 500,000 Californian's were arrested for marijuana offenses.

Under the expungement provisions of Prop 64, anyone convicted of a marijuana offense that is no longer a crime under Prop 64 can return to court and petition to have his or her conviction completely expunged. People who have felony convictions for growing marijuana or possessing marijuana for sale can petition to have their convictions reduced from felonies to misdemeanors.

"The felony reduction provisions of Prop 64," says Attorney Boire, "are especially powerful because reducing an old marijuana felony to a misdemeanor will restore all the civil rights that were lost with the felony conviction, including the right to serve on a jury and to possess a firearm."
