Healthcare Staffing Market in US – Trends, Drivers & Restraints

The healthcare industry in the US is witnessing a shortage of nurses in the country. There is a growing demand for nurses in hospital and community services. According to the US Bureau of Labor Statistics, the demand for registered nurses in the country is expected to grow by 14%-16% by 2021 from 2015. Thus the shortage of nurse and the growing demand of nurses in US is one of the major factor for driving the market.

One of the major reasons behind this increased demand is the fact that a significant number of nurses are getting retired over the next few years. About 55% of the overall nursing workforce, currently in service, in the US, is above 50 years of age. According to the US Bureau of Labor Statistics, over 526,800 nurses will be retiring over the forecast year in the country. Hence there will be a huge requirement of registered nurses. This requirement to fulfil the gap of the manforce requirement is one of the key emerging trends. According to the US Bureau of Labor Statistics and the US Department of Labor, the overall nurse employment is set to increase from 2.86 million in 2012 to 3.44 million by 2022. Also The increase in the demand for home healthcare workforce such as dieticians, nurses, nutritionists, therapists, and home care aides among others will drive the demand for temporary staffing in the market.
