In government being able to effectively communicate in more than one language is an essential skill to have. In Canada this often requires the majority of the staff to speak both of the country's official languages, English and French. However, in today's globally connected world often two languages is not enough for those having to interact with other government officials from around the world. The Berlitz Ottawa Language Centre has been the location where Federal Government officials from all departments have turned for years to learn a new language.

Berlitz Ottawa Language Centre has been the trusted source for Federal, Provincial and Municipal governments officials wanting to expand their language skills. Larry Gauthier, Director of Berlitz Ottawa, has helped countless government departments attain the level of language skills they want to be able to do their jobs more effectively. "For over ten years as Director, I have helped government workers, aides, officials, senators, and more to find the language program that is right for them and get them the fast results they need," said Larry. "We make sure to tailor the lessons to our clients needs, whether in a group setting or for a top official in private."

Language training is not the same for everyone. The Berlitz Ottawa Centre has been working with governments for decades and knows that their language program is going to be a lot different than a student looking to learn Spanish for an internship abroad. The Berlitz Method of teaching focuses on what the client needs and delivers a program centered around that end result. "The personal attention each of our clients get is unlike anything in the industry," said Larry Gauthier. "We really want the client to get everything they can out of their language training, so we make sure to meet with each client to understand those specific language needs before the courses begin."

What Berlitz Ottawa also knows very well is that government officials don't always have the time to attend regular classes. This is the reason Berlitz has developed its Virtual Lesson Programs. With the Virtual programs you have access to the same course material and professional instructors that you find at the Ottawa Language Centre but in a Virtual environment. From the lounge of an airport in Mumbai or on a break from a Senate budget meeting, the Berlitz Virtual Programs can be accessed 24hr a day, 7 days a week.

Access to language is access to power. In the world of politics and government knowing how to speak more than one language and speak that well is an essential ingredient into having one's voice heard above others. Berlitz Ottawa Language Centre is the industry leading language training centre for government employees in the National Capital Region.
