REDMOND, WASHINGTON, UNITED STATES, December 1, 2016
/EINPresswire.com/ -- FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: 1/Dec/2016

Stockpile Reports, an enterprise inventory management system for companies who deal with aggregates and materials, today announced the debut of their Inventory Management Starter Pack. This starter pack costs $3,750 a quarter, and consists of a phone/drone license to the Stockpile Reports service. Additionally they are throwing in a free DJI Phantom 4 Pro and free Apple iPhone 7. Customers use the drone to measure stockpiles from the air and the iPhone to measure piles from the ground.

“The imaging technologies brought by the Phantom 4 Pro and the iPhone 7 have become so good and so inexpensive,” says David Boardman, CEO of Stockpile Reports. “For the purposes of inventory management, the image capture discussion is drawing to a close—the obvious winner being DJI and Apple. The specs and the cost are almost a non-issue, freeing people to focus on solving real business problems. That’s why we’re offering this amazing starter pack with the free Drone and free iPhone.”

“The 20-megapixel one-inch sensor and mechanical shutter of the Phantom 4 Pro are perfect for gathering the precise aerial data that Stockpile Reports incorporates into their solution,” said Tim Nguyen, DJI Business Development Manager. “DJI is excited to partner with Stockpile Reports on such an innovative way to use aerial imagery to get work done faster, better and more efficiently.”

When asked ‘what makes the Stockpile Reports service unique?’, Boardman boasted, “We’re the only solution in the market that gives you the ability to measure stockpiles both from the air and ground, earning 3 patents in the process. We put this offer together to give companies the ability to get up and running with everything they need to be successful managing their inventory. Our solution is purely focussed on automating the inventory process: measuring, review, dispute resolution, approval, and submitting to finance and audit.”

This offer will launch December 1st and be available to aggregate and construction companies in the US via the StockpileReports.com website.

Stockpile Reports is based in Redmond, WA and has offices in Oregon, Texas, Georgia, and North Carolina. It is used by hundreds of companies at nearly 3,000 locations in 23 countries around the world.
