PUNE, INDIA, December 6, 2016
/EINPresswire.com/ --

The analysts forecast the global aerospace 3D printing market to grow at a CAGR of 55.85% during the period 2016-2020.

3D printing manufacturing refers to the process of synthesizing successive layers of materials with the support of computerized control technology to create an object or component. This process empowers manufacturers to produce small and micro-components of almost any shape or size. It also allows the manufacturers to reduce the overall weight of the components, thus substantially reducing the overall weight of an aircraft. This innovative printing method allows cost-efficient and just-in-time (JIT) manufacturing of parts. It also permits quick design and rapid changes of internal features of the components, which would not be possible with traditional manufacturing methods.
