

White Label LMS Release Will Change the Way HR/PEO Do Training

The popular learning management system, eLeaP, will now be available as a training solution for HR/PEO that they may not otherwise be able to provide.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, December 12, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Telania, LLC is pleased to announce the launch of a White Label version of its learning management system, eLeaP. This new capability will allow businesses looking to provide their customers with a learning management system the opportunity to do so without having to develop their own system. As a quick background eLeaP was recently named a Top 10 LMS by Capterra division of Gartner. Now you can benefit from the same world class features and support that many organizations already know.

*Growth
and opportunity*

- In 2013, the revenues of self-paced e-Learning were around $24.4 billion, globally. It is expected to cross $27 billion by 2018.

What can you do with this information?

White label products allow companies to easily brand and market a product for their own purposes without developing it themselves. This is appealing for many fields of business and can help a company further its name and brand without investing thousands of dollars in the creation of their own new products.

The eLeaP White Label tool is one of our most powerful tools for PEO's, consultants and elearning companies to deploy training and elearning to an growing market thirsty for robust solutions.

If you are a Professional Employer Organization (PEO) such as an HR company providing employee handbooks, policies, training and other benefits, you might be leaving money on the table by not offering a full service training solution. By expanding services to customers, companies have the opportunity to bring in a whole new spectrum of possible customers. These are customers that need to add a learning management system to their HR utilities, but don't want to go through the process of searching for a learning management solution. Now, PEO's like HR companies can offer a full service training solution to their existing customers and draw in new customers at the same time.

Customers regularly change service providers or start searching for a replacement software because the solution they currently have hasn't evolved with their needs. No business wants to lose customers because it isn't competing well with its competition. This white label option will let companies step up their game without doing all of the leg work.

As eLearning has taken a greater hold on the market, more and more people have started creating their own eLearning content to provide and sell to learners. As an eLearning course developer, many don't have the option to host their own content. eLeaP's White Label version will allow those people to provide content to learners without advertising another company. Their content can be easily given to students via the eLeaP platform and students won't be bombarded by software branding - just the content and learning they were looking for.

There's no need to reinvent the wheel for many companies. Creating their own learning management system would require a lot of time and money. For many it would mean recreating the same mistakes that others have made before them. Which would no doubt be a waste. Beyond the time and the money, creating a learning management system from scratch would move focus away from a company's true goals. This White Label version of eLeaP, will help to provide needed training and keep a company focused on their long term vision and mission without straying away on new creations.
