The demand for such products is directly correlated with the growth in population. Additionally the demand for adult diapers and sanitary napkins is augmented from regions like China which is dealing with an ageing population. The demand for products across the age groups to improve the personal hygiene has gone up.

Market Overview

Additionally, non-wovens are used extensively in construction industry, especially for road construction. These are used in the form of geotextiles to increase the life span of the roads. These fabrics also ensure comparatively low maintenance. Apart from construction, the fabrics are used in the automobile industry to engineer the exterior and interior parts using non-woven fabrics. An additional property such as ability to mold and lightweight augments the demand from automotive industry.

The market is highly driven by the increased demand for such fabrics from the healthcare industry which is the fastest growing segment by application. These are used in surgical gowns, drapes, surgical & industrial masks, bandages, wipes and towels. These are used in industrial applications also including Many industrial uses include filters, insulation, packing materials, roadbed stabilization sheeting or road-building materials geo-textiles and roofing products.

Scope of the report

This study provides an overview of the global Non-woven Fabric industry, tracking three market segments across four geographic regions. The report studies key players, providing a five-year annual trend analysis that highlights market size, volume and share for North America, Europe, Asia Pacific, and Rest of the World. The report also provides a forecast, focusing on the market opportunities for the next five years for each region.

The scope of the study segments the global non-woven fabric market as material, technology and application. On the basis of material it is segmented as polypropylene, polyesters, nylon, wood pulp, and others. On the basis of technology, it is segmented as spunlaid, air laid, wet laid, carded and others. On the basis of application it is segmented as consumer goods, healthcare, construction, industrial, and others.

Market Research Analysis:

The market is highly application based. The key driver for market growth is increased emphasis on using products to improve the personal hygiene and sanitation. It is expected that the global non-woven fabric market will advance with higher growth rate as compared to previous years. However the current challenge for the market is the fluctuating raw material prices and stringent government regulations.
