

Skyline Displays of Houston Names New President, Sarah Koopersmith

Sarah Koopersmith, daughter of Skyline Displays of Houston's outgoing President, takes the helm of one of Houston's leading trade show exhibit providers.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, USA, December 22, 2016 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Skyline Displays of Houston has announced that after 16 years as President/CEO, Craig Koopersmith is stepping down as President, and his daughter, Sarah Koopersmith, will be taking the position. Skyline Displays of Houston, a full-service exhibit and design house, has been in business for 30 years, and is part of the international Skyline network.

Sarah Koopersmith earned a Bachelor's Degree in Engineering Science from Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas. Koopersmith spent eight years working for Wood Group Mustang, formerly Mustang Engineering, headquartered in Houston, Texas, and spent three of those years on-site at an ExxonMobil Chemical facility in Singapore, where she helped to design and install a massive process control system. Two years ago, Koopersmith left Mustang and took a full-time position with Skyline Displays of Houston.

"She grew up really fast in Singapore," said proud father, Craig Koopersmith. "The little girl that went all alone to the other side of the world came back quite the strong woman! Everybody likes to see their offspring exceed them; in Sarah's case, there shall be no doubt. How do I know? Because she has one very strong trait that keeps her in balance. I've been privileged for 32 years (the last two every day at Skyline) to watch her grow introspectively, improving herself with every valuable experience, good or bad. Skyline Houston is in very good hands." Koopersmith noted that he would be staying on as Skyline Houston's CEO.

"I'm proud to be taking over from my father, and it will be an exciting challenge to achieve the level of leadership he's brought to Skyline Houston over the past 16 years. I look forward to continuing the collaborative approach with clients on which Skyline Houston has built its reputation, and to continuing to find exciting and effective new ways for our clients to build their exhibits with us," said Sarah Koopersmith.
