Medical Ventilators Applications:

Medical ventilators are used in hospitals, ambulance, and from homes which can be portable or fixed. Ventilators for home use are small, lightweight and run on electricity. They can be powered by the internal battery for brief trips outside the home, and can sit on a bedside stand, cart or wheelchair and be used for travel. Most feature various levels of gas/air-flow pressure, volume, rate and duration to control breathing or to wean a patient off the ventilator.

Key Market Driver

Increasing number of geriatric population is a key factor in growth of the medical ventilator market. Patients with problems of chronic respiratory disease require long term ventilation which increases the demand of medical ventilators. Increase in number of Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Diseases (COPD) and improvement in the technology are also playing a major role in the growth of the market.
