The analysts forecast the global air purifying mask market to grow at a CAGR of 6.37% during the period 2017-2021.

Industrial employees are exposed to several occupational hazards, which necessitates the use of suitable protective equipment.

Employees working in various industries like mining, chemical, pharmacy, construction and others are directly exposed to hazardous substances like chemical stone dust, chemical fumes, and gases. Air purifying masks are useful in protecting workers from such hazardous substances. Therefore, various environmental and government agencies in both developed and developing countries are drafting regulations mandating the use of air purifying masks to safeguard the health of industrial employees. These regulations will help the market to grow during the forecast period.
