"strong and sultry"; his 'moves' were "rhythmic"; and his high energy performances commanded attention from start to finish.

As a child, James' father was his musical inspiration, and his love for music was set ablaze at the age of five. James would go on to be the lead singer in his father's R&B band at the prepubescent age of nine, and he remained active in the band well into his teens. In those days his voice was described as pursuing his dreams of becoming a successful R&B artist. He formed the R&B group "LAWAV" (pronounced la-WAVE), which means "Let's All Work Against Violence"; the band used their musical engagements as platforms to speak out against violence. But in the years to come, his dreams of grandeur were cast asunder as his employment, his family, his band, his personal belongings...even his music (at least 100 original songs) were tossed to the wind, as James lost the will to persevere because of excessive drug use and harsh street life.

But on December 13th, 1995, James "turned over a new leaf" by submitting to the voice of the Lord and the call of God upon His life. He received Jesus Christ as his Lord and Savior that day, and he joined Bible Church of God, Inc. soon after. There he operated in music ministry and functioned as a deacon. James married Angela Manning in 1998, and began to pursue his dreams of success in music—but from this point forward, his focus would be 'ministry' through music.

James' break came when one of the deacons from his church took his music to Sugar Radio 900, where he became a household name at the station. Subsequently, radio stations from across the nation began to play his songs. As his music ministry gained momentum, he was asked to be the opening artist for Vickie Winans, Shirley Caesar, and Keith "Wonder Boy" Johnson. He also performed on the same bill with gospel recording artist Pastor John P. Kee at the VIP Conference in Miami, Florida. The ensemble 'James Smith & Nu-Birth' has since traveled to the Bahamas, Canada, and throughout the United States, spreading the gospel of Jesus Christ through music ministry alongside mega recording artists such as Shirley Caesar, The William Brothers, and Tye Tribbett.
