integrate with floral systems like RTI, Dove, Mercury, MAS and Floral Prodigy. This significantly reduces costs when switching and decrease downtime, as well. Companies can setup and use helpful communication features with very little time and effort, unlike traditional phone service, which is costly and time-consuming.

Scale as Needed and Manage Features Effortlessly

There's no question voice over internet protocol is more flexible than traditional phone service. It does not rely on PBX or private branch exchange and, therefore, can be scaled up or down on demand.

Plug Directly into Existing Equipment and Systems

With traditional phone service, there's often a need to purchase extras when integrating new services. However, we

What's more, it gives business the option to add and remove features effortlessly from one easy to use interface.

Improve Customer Experience with Better Employee Training

Customers expect and demand great experiences when placing orders. VoIP gives business owners and managers the ability to listen into calls, record calls, and even interrupt live calls to facilitate better customer service. Employees can easily be trained using these and other helpful features.

Experience Better Team and Vendor Collaboration

With VoIP, calls and other communications are readily available and manageable, being available on demand. This allows businesses to have better collaboration between delivery drivers, vendors, and even customers. When communications are so open, it improves collaboration, fostering better relationships.

Get Very Inexpensive Rates on Long Distance and International Calls

Since traditional phone service employs technology first introduced in the late part of the nineteenth century, infrastructure maintenance is expensive. Those costs are passed on to business in the form of higher calling rates. However, VoIP sends tiny data packets via the Internet, making it a lot less expensive and reducing latency. This provides businesses with significantly lower long distance and international calling rates.
