

The Adventure Writers Competition 2017 opens for submissions March 1 - June 30!

International writing competition is sponsored by the Clive Cussler Collectors Society, Dirk Cussler will choose the winner.

DENVER, COLORADO, UNITED STATES, February 16, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Adventure Writers Competition, sponsored by the Clive Cussler Collector's Society, opens for submissions of adventure-themed novels March 1 through June 30. A $1000 prize is awarded to the winner at the Clive Cussler Collectors Society Convention in October, 2017. Dirk Cussler is set to choose the winner from three finalists.

The competition is open to writers from anywhere on the planet (earth!) if they are unpublished, self-published or even traditionally published, as long as less than 5000 copies of the entry have been sold or given away. There is no restriction on the date of completion or publication – all are welcome. The entire $25 entry fee goes to promoting the winners and the competition. The AWC is part of a non-profit organization.

Get in on the Action!”

Dirk Cussler

“The networking opportunity is as great as the “Clive” trophy, the money and meeting Dirk!” say Peter Greene, AWC Director. “This is our seventh year, and all the judges are ready to read manuscripts of completed novels that meet the entry requirements.”

Detailed information can be found at the AWC website www.adventurewriterscompetition.com Interviews of past winners and judges are highlighted on the site, as well as book trailers of the finalist's novels.

For 2017, there will be two rounds. The first is the “opening round” where judges read the first 3000 – 5000 words of each entry. The top ten entries, our semi-finalists, move to the “Manuscript Round”. Here, judges strive to read each novel and choose the top three as our finalists. Then, it's up to Dirk Cussler to choose the winner.

“You may be a fantastic novelist, but we will never know unless you enter the competition,” says

Greene.
