Speaking at SMi's MilSatCom Asia-Pacific conference this May, Colonel Shinichiro Tsui and Dr Hiroshi Yamakawa from Japanese Cabinet Office will be discussing Japan's space diplomacy with a focus on enhancing space security as well as developing regional cooperation.

Colonel Tsui will address the increasing use of outer space for both civil and security applications and how advancement of space technology can help to enhance assets. He will also talk about the importance of promoting international cooperation including capacity building. Details about the future of space policy for the Japanese MoD and government will also be reviewed.

Dr Yamakawa's talk will outline the key aims and focuses of the Space Security Working Group and discuss sustainable development. Effective utilisation of space and the importance of stable use of outer space for allied forces in the Asia-Pacific region will also be explored.

Firmly established as the leading conference for SatCom and communication experts, MilSatcom Asia Pacific will take place on the 15th-16th May 2017, at the Grand Copthorne WaterFront Hotel in Singapore. Focusing on developing strategic space programmes and space security, the 2017 show invites not only programme managers, capability directors and operational commanders from the armed forces, but will also provide a perfect platform for both operational users and industry to share their experiences in the enhancement of satellite for effective military communications across Asia Pacific.

Notable presenters include Republic of Korea Armed Forces Military, U.S. Air Force, Indian Army, New Zealand Defence Force, Japanese Cabinet Office, ASEAN Chief Information Officer Association, Ministry of Defence of the Republic of Indonesia, Maritime Forces Pacific Headquarters, Indonesia Maritime Studies, S.Rajaratnam School of International Studies, GAPSAT.

The 7th annual event will also feature an all new exclusive half day post conference workshop hosted by The Aerospace Corporation, taking place on the 17th May, 2017.

Attending the event enables you to meet, network and hear about the latest developments in national MilSatCom and space programs from leading nations within the Asia Pacific region, as well as learning how satellite capabilities are effectively used in times of peace as well as war. Explore how key nations such as the US and Canada are assisting the growth of MilSatCom programs in the Asia-Pacific region, and discuss and develop partnerships with allied nations to improve and enhance cooperation effectively.
