

Capital Corp Merchant Banking Approves $105M Funding Agreement for Florida Aquaculture Project

The state-of-the-art aquaculture project will produce 13 different, high-quality fish species, with no off-flavor contamination from water or feed product.

ORLANDO, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, March 1, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The $105 million project involves the construction and completion of fish tanks and hatchery that would allow up to 13 different types of fish to be produced. These premium, high-quality fish products (such as tilapia, stripped bass, and red drum) will be farmed in an environmentally-friendly and economically-efficient way.

Aquaculture's contribution to the world's food basket is essential as global demand for fish grows. Aquaculture is a truly sustainable form of fishery, allowing wild fish stock to remain untouched and thus helping depleted wild fish areas to be replenished in a natural way. Most commercial fish species are severely overfished and supplies cannot meet the demands of the world market. Aquaculture can provide consistently stable supplies of finfish and shellfish into the marketplace to meet this demand.

Experts forecast US aquaculture industry revenue to reach an estimated $1.4 billion in 2018.”
