

Regions Bank and Alamo Lack of Price Disclosure Unfair, Deceptive, and Illegal, FICO Pro and SubscriberWise CEO Says

FICO Supreme Minister and America's Child Protection Chancellor Howe provides FTC evidence of unfair pricing by Regions and Alamo ahead of Lee County lawsuit

WASHINGTON , D.C., U.S.A., March 27, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- "Yesterday I tweeted Federal Trade Commission' Chairwoman Maureen Ohlhausen with concerns and evidence that I argue unequivocally demonstrates unlawful and harmful pricing tactics by Regions Bank and Alamo Car Rental," said David Howe, SubscriberWise founder and national child guardian. "In addition to asking the Chairwoman for help, I provided her the typed content from a recently submitted formal FTC complaint, including the detailed description of the facts.

I've jumped through many hoops for Regions, having provided them overwhelming and uncontroverted proof of non-disclosure which, ironically, originated from their own reservation system.”

“I also included a 9-page presentation with supporting documentation -- including an audio portion of a conversation I had with a Regions 'Dispute' agent. In the audio, the agent explains that 'drop fees' are not disclosed in the booking process because 'they vary by rental location and time of year'.

“From my perspective, Regions failure to disclose this 'drop fee' is a serious problem because the additional amount I had to pay translated into an instant 50 percent price increase at the point of pick-up,” Howe emphasized. “And I had little option but to pay because my family was with me and we had just arrived from Los Angles on a train and had no other transportation arranged or available.”

“Fortunately, however, according to language executed by the U.S.A. Federal Trade Commission, deceptive pricing is illegal: <https://www.fdic.gov/regulations/compliance/manual/7/VII-1.1.pdf> .

“For the record, I also provided this same information to Florida Attorney General Pam Bondi’s Director of Consumer Protections Division Victoria Butler, along with two other senior investigators that I had the pleasure of meeting previously,” Howe confirmed.

“Today I intend to formally submit the evidence to California Attorney General Xavier Becerra, which is the state where the unlawful and deceptive pricing scheme originated.

“For nearly half a year, I’ve tried unsuccessfully to recover the $240.00 undisclosed ‘drop fee’,” Howe added. “It’s a fee that was never warranted because I selected the ‘one-way’ rental at the moment the reservation was made.

“I’ve jumped through many hoops for Regions, having provided them overwhelming and uncontroverted proof of non-disclosure which, ironically, originated from their own reservation system. Why the organization simply doesn’t acknowledge this harm and issue a refund for this never-disclosed and ill-gotten fee is truly beyond me,” Howe concluded.
