

Connexica Awarded Science and Technology Business 2017

Connexica are proud to announce that last night they won The Sentinel Business Award for best Science and Technology Business 2017

STAFFORD, STAFFORDSHIRE, ENGLAND, March 31, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The prestigious event was held at The King's Hall in Stoke-on-Trent and attended by the local businesses and celebrities, providing a great opportunity to celebrate local talent, business and innovation.

Attendees included Keith Brymer Jones, star of Great Pottery Throw Down, who spoke passionately about how Stoke-on-Trent is a 'vibrant and fantastic place to start a business' and that he is backing the bid for Stoke to be City of Culture 2021.

It was a fantastic night for the Potteries with Emma Bridgewater being awarded the Lifetime Achievement award for the work she has done within Stoke and the pottery industry. The events hashtag #LocalandProud was definitely felt throughout the evening and the room.

It is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the team at Connexica and our constant efforts to innovate and develop great technology that competes with the best.”
