Asbury--Respected author, teacher, and life coach helps support Women’s Movement with new satirical picture book.

Lu Pierro, author of The Royal Rumpus and the March of the Pink Hats (Caliente Press ISBN-13: 978-0998832906, 12.99) both satirizes Trump and praises the women who participated worldwide in the Women’s March. 10% of her 2017 profits are donated to the Women’s Movement and to ACLU.

Her mission is to support women in their journey to find their voice as active participants in the political realm. Inspired by the political journalist and cartoonist Thomas Nast who created satirical art during the Civil War, Ms. Pierro, decided to exercise her freedom of speech and take on the Rumpus.

At the core of The Royal Rumpus is the struggle between an egocentric and myopic Rumpus who unwittingly thinks he was won ultimate control in a democratic land, and a group of women who knit up a plan of resistance. Ms. Pierro states that the parody, a time honored form of protest and exposure, is a way for worried people to unwrap the truth and effect change. Parody is a great tool to diffuse the anger and frustration that has been generated by the present administration. Laughter serves as a pressure release for pent up emotions.”

Reviewers of her book have expressed great enthusiasm for the project. Ernest Jaegar, author, editor and critic states "Lu Pierro has handled the absurdity in the White House with a playful satiric voice. Her work will have readers laughing even as they sigh".

“A sardonic, scintillating picture book guaranteed to bring on paroxysms of laughter.” K.D.

Pierro, an accomplished public speaker, is available for phone and e-mail print interviews; on- air/on-camera radio and television interviews; and as a guest blogger/columnist for websites and other print outlets.
