Description

Gasification is a process that converts carbon material, biomass, or municipal waste into another form of energy or products. It converts solid as well as liquid end-products into gas through a chemical reaction. The process works by combining carbon-based materials, which are known as feedstock. The process involves combining the feedstock with small quantities of oxygen. Thus, during the gasification process, the carbon molecules are broken down into a mixture of carbon monoxide (CO) and hydrogen, which is known as syngas.
