All ISO standards are reviewed every five years to establish if a revision is required to keep it current and relevant to the dynamic and globally interconnected world. In September 2015, the International Organization for Standardization released a new revision of the ISO 9001 standard, giving ISO 9001:2008 certified organizations three years to transition. Key changes to the ISO standards include an emphasis on leadership, a focus on risk management and help ensure accountability at all levels of an organization.

With over 1 million certificates issued worldwide, ISO 9001 is the world's most popular management system standard. The standard helps organizations demonstrate that they can offer products and services of consistently good quality to their customers. The revised standard ensures that quality management for any organization is now completely integrated and aligned with all business strategies within an organization. To achieve certification, Mountz, Inc. partnered with TUV SUD America Inc., an independent third party.
