

Living My Illusion - A new ground breaking documentary, unravelling the virus that is silently killing your relationship.

50% of all marriages end in divorce. Separation is an emotionally difficult event, but many people are wondering, is it possible to have a healthy breakup?

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, April 25, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Fear of unworthiness, not honouring our inner knowing, or communicating our truth is the “wake-up call” of living in an illusion.

Healthy marriages are good for couples, their children, society and well-being. Yet 30% to 60% of married individuals will engage in infidelity and 40% to 50% will divorce. This creates a ripple effect that impact's physical, mental, and emotional wellbeing. Like a virus, it spreads into other areas of life, creating a financial black hole that may take years to overcome.

Having experienced the icy touch of “midlife crisis”, Joel Van der Molen sought the help of Tony Jeton Selimi, #1 Amazon bestselling author, spiritual teacher, and healer to understand the root cause of the pain and suffering he was not consciously aware of. Little did he know what the outcome would produce, let alone the path it would create which he is currently on, overcoming the fear of judgement, failure, and success.

This heart-wrenching documentary looks at the 360-degree impact of remaining in an unhealthy marriage and what people can do to either strengthen their relationship or divorce with “Love”.

“

The Living My Illusion documentary series was co-created as an educational tool so that true love can prevail over fear, emotional desperation, and ego elation.”
Tony Jeton Selimi
