Human Vaccines Market which was $ 2.8 billion in 2015 to reach around $ 5.46 billion in future, growing at a CAGR of 11.8% | Human Vaccines Market

PUNE, MAHARASHTRA, INDIA, April 26, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Market Highlights

A vaccine contains a biological preparation of a weakened or killed microbial agent, its toxins or its surface proteins, which provides active acquired immunity against the disease caused by the microbe. Vaccination stimulates and trains the body immunity to recognize and destroy the microbial threat in later encounters. According to World Health Organization (WHO), out of the total number of children worldwide who did not receive the required three doses of diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis vaccines, more than 40% were from sub-Saharan Africa. Sub Saharan Africa accounts for a bulk share of unimmunized people in Africa. The other African nations with large number of unimmunized people include Nigeria, Iraq, Chad, Niger, Angola, Somalia, Sudan, Democratic Republic of Congo, Ethiopia, Iraq, Nigeria, Uganda and South Africa.
