However, when hitting the sea, there are three things that anglers should focus on:

2. Know what fish will be found in abundance in the sea, so that you're equipped with the right fishing gear and well-prepared to battle it out and fight hard with them because game fish may look beautiful but most of them are super agile, extremely tricky and difficult to catch.

The technique that always works and one which we heavily rely on is spotting for feeding birds. Based on our experience, we can confidently say that if you can spot Frigate birds nearby, feasting on chum bait left on top of the water by billfish feeding underneath, then chances are that there are Striped Marlin under the surface. Once spotted, it gets much easier to cast bait, identify areas with highly concentrated fish and catch prey with higher success rate.
