The song “Jane” is a beautifully scripted, mid-tempo pop song in which Lawrence Lee makes his heart transparent to both his female interest and his listening audience. Lawrence Lee’s poetic lyrics and emotional delivery make this song timeless.

“Jane” was filmed on the campus of the University of Mobile in Mobile, AL, the school from which Lawrence Lee will earn his bachelor’s degree next week. It was important to Lawrence Lee to film the video at the University of Mobile, the place where his debut EP Strings & Dreams was birthed and released. The video’s movie-style format tells a story that closely matches his life as a college student athlete. In the video, Lawrence Lee is a popular basketball player, but his star talent isn’t enough to gain the attention of the beautiful and smart female student he has his eyes on named Jane. Little does Jane know there is more to Lawrence Lee than meets the eye. The story grows more intriguing as Lawrence Lee discovers that music may be the way into Jane’s heart and as he tries to find out if she feels the same. "Jane" was directed by Steven Henley (Henley Productions), a talented videographer in Valdosta, GA who offers many services such as music videos, commercials, highlights and more.

Lawrence Lee’s debut EP Strings & Dreams is AVAILABLE NOW on iTunes, Google Play, Amazon Music and via all other digital music distribution outlets worldwide. To learn more about Lawrence Lee and to follow this epic artist, visit iamlawrencelee.com and view his electronic press kit.
