

Anita Torres of Passion Powered Consulting to be Featured on CUTV News Radio

MOUNT DORA, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, May 22, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- "I love my job, but I hate where I work." Does this sound like you or the people who work for you? A recent Gallup poll found that 70% of the US workforce is not engaged at work. Something is missing.

According to executive coach and organizational consultant Anita Torres, what's missing is passion. Torres is a self-described "Passionista" and the founder of Passion Powered Consulting. Torres helps clients improve performance by developing masterful communication skills and embracing the qualities of courageous and caring leaders.

"I help organizations change those engagement numbers," says Torres. "My mission is to inspire and guide leaders to communicate simply, engage powerfully and really be leaders worth following."

What is the culture of your organization and how is that culture currently being expressed? What kind of culture do you want to create? What is the impact you want? Torres help business owners, entrepreneurs and CEOs foster organizational cultures that encourage passionate leaders with powerful communication.

"My name defines my purpose: Training Organizations to Realize their Right to Extraordinary Success. That's what drives me," says Torres. "Passionate leaders + Powerful communication + Productive teams = Profitable results: Those are the Four P's that brings life and vitality to any business or organization who is committed to inspire, engage, and thrive."

My mission is to inspire and guide leaders to communicate simply, engage powerfully and really be leaders worth following.”

how to connect deeply through conversation.

"Change your conversations, change your life' is foundational to the work being done in C-IQ," says Torres. "People need models. They need to be able to visualize what strong leadership looks like and how it feels. I'm really looking forward to putting C-IQ it into action and I wholeheartedly believe that it has the potential to create a really positive, collaborative, and trusting workplace."

Torres says though her conversations are primarily about business issues and increasing team performance, she is also an advocate for having a real life. Being a Passionista is also about being the same person at home as you are at work; integrated and aligned with your values.

“I am completely passionate about guiding and inspiring, motivating, educating, training, coaching and consulting my clients to live their life as powerfully and passionately as possible,” says Torres. “Whatever works in the workplace, try it at home and see how your life improves, too.”

CUTV News Radio will feature Anita Torres in a two-part interview on May 24th and May 31st at 12pm EDT.
