

WannaCry Ransomware is no threat to SMBs protected by Tie National's Guardian

Tie National's Guardian Data Protection has been confirmed to protect against WannaCry Ransomware

AURORA, IL, UNITED STATES, May 22, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As of the morning of May 15th, CNET reported that the WannaCry ransomware has been updated without the kill switch and new variations are already causing havoc amid businesses worldwide; however clients of Tie National, LLC's Guardian data protection service have been unafraid of the threat worrying the business world over the past week. Tie National has confirmed the zero-day threat protection included in Guardian (<http://www.tienational.com/guardian>) stops the attack before it can reach the network.

Tie National collaborated with industry leaders to create Guardian; a five layer bundled data protection service for small businesses with 10 computers or less. They also provide high-end security solutions for enterprise and multi-location businesses across the US. Guardian's superstar element protecting subscribed SMBs from the aggressive attacks from WannaCry is the CryptoGuard provided by Sophos. CryptoGuard intercepts spontaneous ransomware encryption, and returns files back to a previously safe state.

Guardian optimizes performance with intelligent traffic prioritization along with state of the art intrusion prevention to protect against malware, ransomware and zero-day exploits through use of multi-tiered anti-virus engines combined with IDS/IPS. Tie National created Guardian as an affordable monthly subscription to protect small businesses without hardware costs or expensive maintenance for clients wanting to protect both their business and their budget.
