

First-rate Trailer Hands a Perfect Translation of a Book's Essence

CHARLOTTE, NC, UNITED STATES, May 24, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In a must-see intensifying, enthralling and eye-opening trailer of David Pliner's Short, Short Tales, readers will capture an intimation of the book's essence as it presents the extracted colors, emotions and tone present in every page of the book.

Short, Short Tales is an anthology that is blended with funny remarks, vulgar comments and a slingshot of satirical writing. It contains the author's experiences and interpretations covering various events such as: corruption, pollution, greed, loneliness, discrimination, futility, sex and the likes. All these are perfectly depicted in the trailer. Its scenes and graphics will make you explore the depths of your thoughts. The visual elements will take you to your wildest imagination.

Pliner is indeed excited with the book trailer launch as he hopes that the release will ignite ideas in the book lovers' creative minds, especially those who share the same interests as his. Two of the stories that he would highly recommend for the readers are: The Old Mill Stream, a whimsical piece and Hogan's Choice.

About the Author:

David Pliner is now seventy-nine years old and has embarked upon a new career, and this is his first book. Writing has been a lifelong ambition, but this is the first opportunity he had to write as he has retired to become a full-time caregiver. He studied American and British literature and poetry in college. He served in the US Army both active and reserve for seven years. He just finished his new novel which is now ready for publication. If you liked Catch-22 by Joseph Heller, you should like this novel equally well.
