Microsoft and Direct Line are Headline sponsors of the UK's largest diversity awards, attracting a growing list of supporters including Sir Lenny Henry, Graham Norton and Katie Piper.

Olympic Diver Tom Daley said, 'The National Diversity Awards is a true celebration. A celebration of role models and community organisations who are having a huge impact on people lives. Everybody who has been nominated and shortlisted is striving towards making society better for everyone, regardless of age, gender, race, faith, religion, sexual orientation or disability.

I would like to wish all nominees the very best of luck at this year's National Diversity Awards'. Hollyoaks star Annie Wallace and autism campaigner Aston Avery received accolades at last year's ceremony alongside a host of incredible award winners.

With support from national Cheerleaders, Mermaids were commended in 2016 for providing incredible support to more than 1000 children and teenagers each year with gender identity issues. And 'Voice of Nations' founder Dr. Sylvia Forchab-Likambi was applauded for empowering thousands of disadvantaged women and girls worldwide.

Aim Academy, Black Cultural Archives, and Channel 4 were also recognised amongst some of the UK's most inspiring role models, community organisations and inclusive employers.

The National Diversity Awards receives over 20,000 nominations and votes annually. Founder & CEO Paul Sesay said, 'Unlocking Britain's diverse talent and rewarding unsung champions remains at the heart of these awards. As we enter our 6th year, I know there are still so many game changers who remain unnoticed and unheard. We aim to provide a platform for those who have the passion and determination to spread the positive message of inclusivity. I look forward to learning about this year's nominees and witnessing their spectacular journeys.'

Nominations are now open and close June 09th 2017 - so don't miss out on your chance to get involved!
