

Key Themes Centred Around Regulation and New Market Dynamics at 8th Annual Biosimilars Industry Summit

Biosimilars 2017 draws from European experience to unveil new market access and commercialisation strategies for an evolving pharmaceutical landscape

LONDON, ENGLAND, UNITED KINGDOM, June 14, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Biosimilar drug manufacturers will no longer need to wait an extra six months after FDA approval to launch their product, following a recent U.S Supreme Court decision. The ruling which allows biosimilar drugs to enter the market faster is expected to save patients and the U.S. health system billions of dollars.*

Following on from changes in governing rules and the emergence of new market dynamics, SMI Group's 8th annual industry summit on Biosimilars & Biobetters will feature three key themes on the current biosimilars environment; market access; and regulation; when it returns to Central London this Sept.

Tailored for a global audience, the agenda for 2017 will draw from Europe's booming Biosimilars market which has been leading the way in drug development due to favourable EMA policies. It will welcome expertise from the likes of Merck, QuintilesIMS, Boehringer Ingelheim, Teva and more.

Current Biosimilars Environment: This session will discuss 10 years of biosimilar experience in Europe and present updates on the second wave of Biosimilars for attendees to understand and identify market trends.

Excellent speakers, I like the focus on legislation as this is not generally covered in biosimilars conferences - Past Attendee"

Health Products Regulatory Authority

Market Access: Case study insight on the first biosimilar approved for Osteoporosis will look to develop techniques in bringing the next generation of biosimilars to market. Highlights will also include talks surrounding product differentiation and commercialisation.

Regulation: This spotlight will address FDA interchangeability and what it means to the industry. It will also offer strategic direction on compliance when designing switching studies and choosing reference products; and explore current IP laws in biosimilars.
