

What to do when you purchase a Yacht or Boat

Buying yachts and boats is a complex business, but with the right advice you won't be left all at sea.

LONDON, UK, UK, June 20, 2017
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Purchasing your first yacht, or upgrading to your next one, is a significant investment decision. And while the perks of a yacht owning lifestyle are many, it is important to understand and deal with any challenges involved.

The first thing you'll need to consider is finance. What is your budget? You need to set a budget that is realistic for both your aspirations and your pocket. Take into account buying costs and depreciation. Most people understand that once you have driven a new car off the forecourt, the vehicle becomes immediately second hand and loses value. The same principle applies to purchasing a new yacht. Although the depreciation won't necessarily be as dramatic as with a new car, it is certainly a factor that needs to be considered.

Take the legwork out of purchasing your yacht or boat.....

Your search will also need to be informed by questions about how you intend to use your yacht. This will determine the specifics you need – everything from engine power, to space and size, to what finishes you would like to see in terms of upholstery and on-board facilities!

So, how to navigate these choppy waters and find the yacht that's right for you?

Yacht sellers have for a long time employed agents to help them achieve the best possible price for the vendor. Increasingly, buyers are taking the same approach. You need a professional on your side. A well informed and well connected agent can save you time and uncertainty, as well as potentially saving you tens of thousands of pounds (or more) in up-front costs.

At Go Earth your aspirations to yacht ownership are supported with a bespoke service that begins with answering your initial questions with a free – no obligation – consultation, through the whole process including arranging transport of your yacht to your chosen marina. In particular, Go Earth acts as your negotiation agent in the all important procurement and purchase process.
