Author Shares What to do When You Are the New Kid and Are Trying to Fit In and Make Friends

HOLLYWOOD, FL, UNITED STATES, July 3, 2017

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Florida-native author Jenn Monroy a.k.a. "Jenny Foor", in her book I Am Somebody Special, encourages young children to feel good about themselves. Most importantly that it is never too early to teach the power of a positive attitude.

With the help of her book characters Penelope Polar Bear and all the extra "special" friends she makes along the way, the book proudly gives key connections on how to show others just how truly special you really are.

Jenny Foor's book is a moving force for her readers, addressing struggles and challenges among children and even adults. It is her utmost desire to see kids being liked and loved by peers as well as being treated fairly for all of their special gifts and talents.

A degree holder in Sociology and Psychology at the prestigious Florida Atlantic University, and with a heart and soul that is truly dedicated to all children, Jenn Monroy successfully created a literature that will help children cope with challenges that exist all around us every day.

Jennifer Monroy

I Am Somebody Special, wants to raise kid's bursting with self-esteem and confidence; ready to tackle any adventure. The book will solidify a lesson that will build a solid foundation in equipping kids with lifelong social, practical, physical and emotional skills as well as a great read to nudge that boost of confidence and feel-good vibes into story time and circle times across the globe.

About the Author:

Jenn Monroy a.k.a. "Jenny Foor" is a Florida native who graduated from Florida Atlantic University with a Bachelor's degree in Sociology and Psychology. My heart and soul belongs to children of all ages and backgrounds. My greatest wish is for children to be liked and loved by their peers and those who care for them for who they are on the inside and for what they bring to this world. Physical traits should not matter and children should be encouraged by the community to be proud of where they come from and be proud of any "special" traits they have. All children deserve the opportunity to shine and rise to the top of their class and be friends with whomever they wish. If in the end that person chooses not to be their friend then that is their loss, but each child in this world needs to be proud of the "special" person they are! God made each of us just the way we are for a specific reason! May God bless each and every one of you... young and old and always remember ... I Am Somebody Special!
