PUNE, INDIA, July 17, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ --

The analysts forecast the global retinal drugs market to grow at a CAGR of 11.66% during the period 2017-2021.

Ophthalmic disorders largely consist of minor disorders that need minimal or no treatment, however, few other disorders become critical in nature and need specialist care. A delay in treatment in case of critical disorders may even lead to vision loss.

Retinal disorders, glaucoma, dry-eye, infection/inflammation in the eyes, and allergic/otic problems are the major ophthalmic disorders. The retinal drugs market holds the largest share of the global ophthalmic disorder treatment market, followed by glaucoma treatment drugs market. The global retinal drugs market is expected to grow with a high CAGR of 11.66% due to the high demand of age-related macular degeneration (AMD) drugs and diabetic eye disease drugs. This is due to the rising geriatric population and an increase in the population with diabetes. Also, countries across the globe are investing significantly in the healthcare sector. This has, in turn, increased awareness and diagnosis rate of the disease.
