PUNE, INDIA, July 18, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Aviation Security Market:

Executive Summary

2016-2022 Market CAGR 8.8%. Segmented By 18 Countries

Following ISIS terror attacks in Brussels and Istanbul airports, one cannot underestimate the importance of an effective European airport security environment and its effect on the aviation security market. Attacks, which were made possible by the airport security loopholes, will need to be addressed and new modes of operations will need to be adopted.

European airport security markets are going through major shifts. Markets once dominated by the U.S. are now moving to Europe and other regions' airports. New and maturing airport security services and technologies such as automated border control kiosks, cargo screening, cybersecurity, airport perimeter security systems and advanced ICT technologies, create new market niches and fresh business opportunities.

The European aviation security market is forecasted to make a robust comeback, generating a 2016-2022 CAGR of 8.8%.

According to the aviation security market report, the market growth is boosted by the following drivers:

- The terror attacks at Brussels and Istanbul airports.
- The European air passenger traffic growth.
- Public demand for enhanced airport security.
- Advancements in airport security technology and infrastructure.
- The need to streamline airport security processes using new Technologies (e.g., Automated Border Control, ICT) to reduce passengers' waiting time.
- Replacement and upgrades of outdated airport security systems.

Growing aftersales revenues.
