Packaging is the process of boxing or wrapping of various items and products in containers, paperboard boxes, bubble wraps, or other storage units. This is done for the purpose of storage, sale, distribution, use, and gifting of these products. Metal is one the key packaging materials among others, which include plastic, paperboard, or glass. Metal packaging, when in direct contact with the product contained in it, does not react with the chemical composition of the packaged item. Apart from withstanding the chemical formulations of the products, it also protects them from the outside environment such as exposure to light, air, and humidity.
