Trends suggest that the market growth potential lies majorly in Asia-Pacific region with China and India being the most potential targets for the industry due to growing banking population and demand for cash. Moreover, despite the considerate decline in ATM installed base in Europe, Middle East and Africa (EMEA) region, the worldwide ATM market is expected to escalate.

The factor such as growing GDP, rising replacement demand of ATMs in developed countries, integration of check-imaging technology, cash recycle and continuously growing demand in developing countries are the primary growth drivers of global ATM market. However, the threat of security breaches, dynamic technological advancements and operational threats for ISOs hinder the market growth.
